Jagr in touch with 2-3 NHL teams

LeBrun: Jagr still hopes to play in NHL this season

Jaromir Jagr is drawing interest from the KHL, but his dream of playing again in the NHL may not be dead yet.

According to TSN Hockey Insider Pierre LeBrun, Jagr is in contact with two-to-three NHL clubs and is hoping to sign before the end of training camp.

Should he fail to sign before the end of camp, LeBrun reports Jagr could then look into joining the KHL and playing in the Olympics.

However, in any scenario, the 45-year-old is not considering retirement, according to LeBrun. Jagr spent last season with the Florida Panthers, scoring 16 goals and adding 30 assists while appearing in all 82 games. He became the league's second-leading scorer all-time last season, with his 1,914 points trailing only Wayne Gretzky.

Larry Brooks of the New York Post reported in July the Panthers promised to re-sign Jagr after the expansion draft, but then changed their mind.

What Do the British Prime Minister and George Clooney Have in Common? All have links to the small English village of Sonning on the river Thames

When Theresa May unexpectedly and rather suddenly replaced David Cameron as prime minister of the U.K., journalists scrambled to find out more about her personal life.

Ms. May has always been a very private person, but one little-known fact about the new leader has come to light: She is one of the many public figures who favor a small village on the river Thames just outside Reading and about one hour's drive from central London.

When she's not in her Westminster flat or at her new home at 10 Downing St., Ms. May and her husband, Philip, have a weekend retreat in Sonning, where their neighbors include Boris Johnson, the new foreign secretary who campaigned for Brexit, and Led Zeppelin guitarist Jimmy Page.

Even singer Taylor Swift and Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie have reportedly considered buying another home in the area.

However, perhaps Ms. May's most glamorous neighbors to date are George and Amal Clooney—the A-list actor and his lawyer wife bought a nine-bedroom mansion in Sonning around two years ago.

The home, known as Aberlash House, dates to the 17th century, sits on four acres of land and boasts a spa, swimming pool, tennis court, boathouse and a separate cottage. They had been renovating the estate at a rumored cost of £20 million ($26.4 million) and are thought to have moved into their new home in April.
